ABSTRACT

Digitalization is often thought about only in terms of technical possibilities; the feasibility of its implementation in labor processes and the needs of the latter are given little attention. In our Laboratory, we want to invert this process: to place the focus on the needs of human labor and, with this as point of departure, to ask where and how digitalization can best support and facilitate labor processes.

Keywords: digitalization, digitalized labor, labor processes, participatory research, mixed methods
